ABSTRACT

The present invention relates generally to a catheter which enables the venting or decompression of gases therethrough and, more particularly, to enteral tubes or catheters. The catheter may be configured to allow continuous venting with reduced concern about liquid leakage or the need for the user to limit their activities or assume certain positions during venting.

5